Computer Literacy Programme Launched

By David Jabati

A US-based Non-Governmental Organisation, Sierra Visions Inc. (SVI) last week launched its Brain Gain Training Project at the PCL International, Circular Road, Freetown.

The two day computer training in Microsoft Excel/Access is part of the organisation's efforts to enhance the capacity of Sierra Leoneans especially youths in the area of computer literacy. According to a member of the organisation who also served as facilitator in the training, Mamesho Macauley, this is the first training the organisation has conducted in Sierra Leone. "Plans are already underway to provide further training in the Microsoft office suite, information technology and other professional skill courses," the facilitator said. The main purpose of the Brain Gain Project is to develop the human capital lost during the country's civil war and to foster social and economic development in Sierra Leone. The organisation also embarks on other projects as part of its mission. It also provides scholarship to students at the tertiary level as well as books for young children.
